ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A method coping a change in hardware accesses a product of a user through a network and acquires information on the product of the user. It further acquires information on a part to be changed, and generates information on a product that requires change of a part from the acquired information on the product of the user and information on the part to be changed.

5